B. H. BRISTOW,

SUBJECT TO THE DECISION OF THE

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION

OUR NATIONAL CENTENNIAL.

The House has passed the Centennial appropriation bill by a vote of 146 yeas to 130 nays. The announcement of the result of the vote was received with great applause. The notable speeches of the day upon the bill were those of Thompson of Massachusetts, Lamar of Mississippi, and Robbins of North Carolina. This was the first time Mr. Thompson had addressed the House. He is the successor of Ben Butler, and there was naturally curiosity as to how he would acquit himself. His speech at once put him in the front rank. Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Louisiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Nevada and Nebraska voted solid for the bill. West Virginia is the only State that went solidly against it. It is not too much to say that the celebration of the hundredth birthday of our country's independence will be the greatest pacific event of the century. Compared with the Exposition of 1876, that of England in 1851 and of Paris in 1861 will appear dwarfed and insignificant. This will not be so much on account of the grandeur of the scale on which the undertaking will be carried out as by reason of the recollections that will cluster around the centennial festival, the permanent harmony to which it will give rise, and the far reaching good which it will accomplish. It will not be merely a cordial renewal and continuance of friendship between the old world and the new—for that great physician, Time, has healed the wounds and allayed the heart-burnings which were caused by wrenching America from England—but it will operate as a magical pacifier between the North and the South, and will lastingly cement the bonds of brotherhood and union from end to end of this great Republic. If the South committed a grievous error, the North will be free to admit that it was not entirely without blame; mutual condonation will accompany mutual confession, and both will cheerfully allow that they are wiser than they were a decade and a lustum ago. The pleasing promise is that we shall be more united than ever. Let us remember, too, by way both of instruction and warning, since we have started in our race of freedom, civil broils and external warfare have so disrupted Europe that, with the exception of England and Austria, and only partially the latter, not one of its nationalities remains as intact as it was an hundred years ago. Even the Papacy, which, as a temporal power, stood for nearly eleven centuries, has ceased to be such, much less remaining what it once was—a dictator to the kings of the earth, and the arbiter of nations' destinies. While, therefore, the major part of Europe has fallen away from its original national greatness, America has gone on acquiring strength, and, if she only be true to herself, her present power vast as it is compared to what it will be when our descendants shall celebrate the second centennial, may be likened to an infant beside a Hercules.

STOCK MARKET.—The San Francisco Alta of Wednesday morning says: The market presents a strong tone in the leading stocks carrying conviction that a heavy upward feature will soon be its leading characteristic. Although the figures exhibit no large changes, the prices prevailing denote that the feeling of confidence is steadily gaining strength, which is constantly stimulated by the increasing ease of the money market. Banks are gradually getting into position to loan upon this class of securities, and already some are advancing on such collaterals. With an easy money market, promising developments in the mines, and the strong speculative desire of our people, the great advance in mining stocks can not be far distant.

PROPOSED COMMERCIAL TREATIES.

Four commercial treaties are talked of in Congress, and two are now under consideration. They are with Canada, the Hawaiian, Cuba and Mexico. Three Commissioners are now in Washington pressing the Canada treaty, and they have a very earnest advocate in Ward, of New York, of the House Committee. The Committee has given the subject consideration enough to direct a subcommittee to prepare a report. The Ways and Means Committee has commenced anew the consideration of the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty. The greatest objections to the treaty are presented by the sugar interests. The contest is between the San Francisco and New Orleans sugar markets. The proposed treaties with Cuba and Mexico are subjects only of speculative discussion.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

For the first time in the history of the road, the Central Pacific Company report a decrease in their earnings. The deficit occurred in December, and amounts to $91,000 as compared with the same month last year. There was no interruption to travel in either month, and we are surprised at the falling off. However, the earnings for the year show an increase of nearly $2,500,000. The gross earnings for December and for the year compare as follows:

	December.	For the Year.
1875	$1,116,400	$13,919,400
1874	1,170,400	14,522,200
1875	1,279,000	16,970,000

The business for the past year, both in freight and passengers has been the largest since the opening of the road, but will probably be surpassed during the current year.

OUR CIRCUIT COURTS.

Sargent's bill fixing the time of holding Circuit Courts has passed. It provides that terms be held in California on the first Monday of February, the second in July and the fourth in November. For Oregon the second Monday in April and the first in October. For Nevada the third Monday in November and March each year. Said terms to be instead of those now required, the Act to take effect February 1st; provided that a term previously commenced in any District may be continued until the time of commencement of the term in said District to be held under the provisions of this bill.

AN EXPLANATION.

The reasons that the Central Pacific will not issue excursion tickets to the Centennial Exhibition are thus given by the General Passenger Agent: If the concession were made, say the railroad people, the regular passenger business would be ruined, since no one would go East without an excursion ticket, which he would sell at Omaha, or some point not far beyond. Another difficulty occurred in the impossibility of satisfying the public with any reasonable reduction.

RAYMOND & ELY MINE.—The fifth annual meeting of the stockholders of the Raymond & Ely Mining Company was held on Tuesday. Owing to the large amount of prospecting and other extraordinary expenses, the current income has been insufficient to cover the disbursements, and stockholders have been called upon to make up the deficiency in the usual way. Three assessments have been levied during the year, and the total amount collected from that source is $330,204. The mills were engaged on tailings until July, and of course did not produce much bullion; but since then good average ore has been worked, and the total receipts from bullion have been $738,306. About $14,500 has been received from other sources. This swells the total receipts to $1,083,000. The disbursements were $1,199,930, including $125,300 unliquidated balances of the previous year, $241,400 for extracting ore, $268,700 for milling, $260,900 for prospecting, $54,800 for balance on pump, $72,400 for adverse claims and legal expenses, $31,600 for construction, $34,400 to the Nevada Central Railroad, and $110,400 for miscellaneous purposes. The unliquidated balance carried over into the current year amounts to $109,500. There is evidently considerable work yet to be done before the mine can pay dividends.

Argument on Pacific Railroads.

The Senate Committee on Pacific Railroads met Tuesday evening to hear parties representing the Texas and Pacific Railroad on the one hand and the Central and Southern Pacific of California on the other, on the question of completing the thirty-second parallel line to the Pacific Coast. Colonel Thomas A. Scott explained fully the provisions of the Texas-Pacific bill, showing how completely the Government would be secured in the proposed indorsement of interest on its bonds, not only by earnings of the line but by the proceeds of sale of land and the reservation of at least $7,000 of bonds per mile in the Treasury of the United States. He spoke of the vital necessity to the Pacific coast of a competing line and showed how enormously freights had been advanced immediately after the adjournment of the last Congress and the acquisition of the Mail Steamship line by the present Pacific routes. He dwelt emphatically upon the necessity of competition, not only to the coast, but to the entire commonwealth, and called to mind that under the present law the Government could not control the rates on the Central Pacific Railroad until it had earned 10 per cent. on its capital, one hundred and fifty million dollars. He contended that he practically only wanted to regulate the rates and give the merchants of California fair and reasonable rates by the building of this Texas and Pacific line.

Mr. Huntington on behalf of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific followed. He claimed that the parties who built the original thirty-one miles of that road had done so out of their own pockets, and had only received 18 per cent. on their investment for fourteen years; but he did not state what per centage had been received from the construction of the balance of the road. Huntington claimed that the Texas-Pacific having failed to build the number of miles specified in its charter within the time then laid down, had forfeited its land grant; that Congress had the right to give to the Southern Pacific road, who were now building east toward Fort Yuma, and would eventually build to the boundary line of Texas. He explained Mr. Scott's statement, that the Central Pacific had paid for the rails of the Southern Pacific Company, by alleging that it was impossible to keep the rails of the two Companies distinct, and they were on very neighborly terms. They were glad to oblige each other by lending to each other just as the emergency might require, and stated that it was in this way the Central Pacific had paid for a portion of the Southern Pacific rails.

Huntington was followed by Judge Kennard of New Orleans, who made an exceedingly forcible address, the main points of which was that the South looked upon the building of the Texas-Pacific road as of much more importance than any political measure, and that, having carefully examined Huntington's bill, he was authorized to state that they should prefer to do without a road rather than accept it upon Huntington's terms. He claimed that there was no constitutional power to prevent the Government from extending the aid desired; but the question above and beyond all constitutional law was whether the Government, having power to create an evil, could then say it was impotent to correct it. He said that the monopoly through which they were suffering was one created by the Government, and they had a right to look, and will look, for such measures as would relieve the people of the South from it.

SECRETARY BRISTOW AND THE WHISKY RING.—A desperate attempt is being made by the whisky ring to break the force of the prosecution against them by publishing through-out the country base rumors against the President and Secretary Bristow. Column after column has been devoted to pure fiction, in the vain hope that the public would demand immunity for the revenue thieves while considering the charges against their prosecutors. Money has been freely used to start a counter current and the ring could supply millions more if success were possible. But every effort to escape has thus far failed. The hand of the law has been laid upon these wrong doers, and its grasp will not be released until justice is satisfied. The President has said, "Let no guilty man escape," and Secretary Bristow is determined, so far as human foresight and courage can avail, to carry out this order both in spirit and in letter. The Secretary of the Treasury need fear nothing from his enemies. He has already entrenched himself in the confidence of the people, and they will sustain him in enforcing the laws, and in prosecuting those who violate them. The administration of President Grant will take no steps backward in prosecuting those who have been defrauding the revenue. It is in downright earnest, and will punish the guilty whenever or wherever they are discovered, or whoever they may be.—Washington Republic.

EXHIBIT STEVENSON.—C. C. Stevenson writes from Philadelphia to H. F. Rice, at Carson, that Nevada can not get more than six inches square of space in the main building for the exhibition of her minerals; for if more were allowed the State of Pennsylvania would fill the building with masses of coal and iron. Seems as though the State of Pennsylvania is running this thing to suit herself. The above we find in the Reveille. That is room enough for just such a mill as Mr. Stevenson will erect, and if the space was just a little larger the best thing the State of Nevada can do is to give up the mill project and exhibit Stevenson. He should be thus honored, for though he does not say so, it is too evident that his main object is to exhibit himself, and in order to do that more to his own satisfaction and that of his numerous admirers no attempt should be made to throw him into the shade by exhibiting anything else from Nevada.—Pioche Record.
